CALLING ALL DOG WALKING GROUPS

There are many benefits of being in a group., including:

- socialisation
- support
- health & fitness
- advice & support
- security
- visiting new locations

I am being asked more frequently if I know of any dog walking and activity groups in various areas that allow new members to join.

The only dog walking groups I know of are listed on my website. Which unfortunately is still a very short list.

I am calling out to all dog walking groups who are happy to be listed on my website so that potential new members can look for groups near them.

Group organisers can contact me at tigger@tigger.club or messaging me through my social medias pages.

Some frequent questions:

- How often groups meet up
- Are they on or off lead walks
- Distance the walks cover
- Any charges for membership
- Are the groups breed specific
- What activity groups are there

A MESSAGE FROM TIGGER

Hi Pals,
October Brings the start of the "noisy" season.
This is when humans feel the need to spend vast amounts of money on noisy, scary, Fireworks.
I live in hope each year that they will be restricted to official public displays only.

Hopefully you don't get too much noise from fireworks.

I have been out exploring this month. As my human's car can not be trusted to travel great distances, or any distance at all BOL!,

My BFFs Major and Erica's human volunteered to let me (and my human) join them in their car.

We travelled as far south (yes pals it is south for me BOL!) to Nottingham and then North to the very dog friendly Innerleithen in Scotland.

Not on the same day I have to add.

I was excited to travel and meet everyone. I hope I get time to do it again.

Although touring the UK via every coffee shop could take a while BOL!

Nose bump to you

NEWS FROM DORIS - THE ROVING REPORTER

Hi pals,
Towards the end of my Welsh odyssey we went to Anglesey. This may be an island but it is very, very close to the mainland by bridge and you'd never know! Not sure on the roads in the motorhome we headed across the island to Rhosneigr. To be honest we would have ended up there anyway as it is regarded as one of the island's best beaches. I have to say, it is mighty fine (although not up to Barmouth standards) It's long, flat and sandy but it is also windy and full of seaweed and shingle. In the village there is a doggy friendly pub and we stayed in a lovely field with countryside view.

Braving the A road around the island we thought we'd find a nice beach with a campsite. Having got stuck on a tree, caused traffic jams and blocked narrow lanes we decided the supposedly caravan friendly roads were not! We clung to the main road and missed most of the island. Benllech was stunning though and the view of the bay from the field above amazing. The slightly run down site had the best toilets with a seaview.

And so back to the mainland and through the edges of Snowdonia. Again not the best in a larger van, definitely a VW would be the perfect size camper to explore.... or maybe the train. Driving straight through the packed tourist trap of Betsy Coed our last stop in Wales was by far our favourite, Blaenau Ffestiniog.

If you are ever in Snowdonia you must pop by. The quarry is stunning and the surrounding hills are all of slate, the friendly town is small and needs visitors. There's a slate mine to visit and the amazing Ffestiniog railway to Porthmadog is a great day out and dog friendly. We went for a night and ended up staying 3 days.

So that was Wales pals, a massive 5 paws out of 5 from me!

YODA AND CHEEZLT'S SCRATCHING POST

Hi pals!

Guess what... We got two more brothers! Their names are Runt and AJ (we'll tell you more about them later).

Momma must think that every time she takes in another kitty that means that the house gets bigger.

Sorry Momma!

That's not how it works. The only things that get bigger around here is us! More cats.

More food bowls. More food. That all equals fat cats.

Well, except for Yoda, who does NOT like to take his thyroid medicine.

We are supposed to be moving to a new home soon. We have been helping Momma pack up stuff.

We are the bestest helpers. We like to lie on the boxes to make sure they don't fall over.

Since we are getting bigger and fatter (due to circumstances listed above) it's a really easy job! We are SO good at it! So good, in fact, that we get extra treats!

It will be exciting to have new places to hide, new smells to sniff, new channels to watch on Cat TV.

We will have more room for more "houses"...especially after all the packed up boxes are empty!

We'll have all new stories to tell. We may have to take turns story telling. That might be fun.

Well, we will figure it out. We are cats. We are smart.

See you next month,
Yoda & Cheezlt

DUSTY'S DIARY

Hi Pals,

It's been another hectic month for the human, not for me I might add, I've spent lots of time sleeping on my new sofa...although more about that later.

The human has been chopping down entire trees in our new garden, and there has been such an abundance of sticks that I haven't been able to chew them all up, and they have been burned on a big bonfire.

I have spent so much time rescuing perfectly good sticks from being destroyed, only for them to be thrown on the burning pile anyway. It's an absolute travesty, and I can't get the human to understand how dogkind feels about this wasteful behaviour.

But back to that comfy new sofa, we all know a hound needs a comfortable place to rest their weary paws.

I had just got used to being able to rest my chin on the sofa to look out of the window to check for blighters, and was getting all comfy, when the entire curtain rail crashed down on me. I got the shock of my life, and the human came running following a huge greyhound scream of death that was heard two streets over...well even now I have had no peace.

The human has been drilling and shouting funny words at the wall for ages, and we still have no curtains. I'm secretly relieved tho, as I keep checking for scary gremlins behind curtains after my near death experience, you can't be too careful pals.

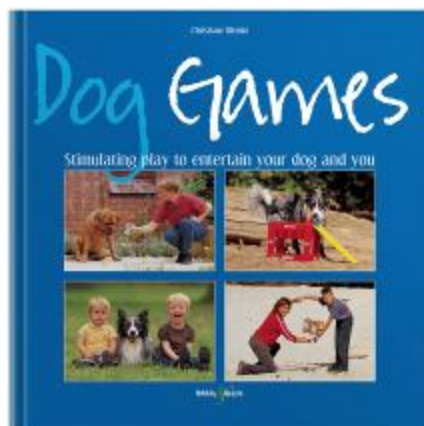

Until next time.
Have a pawsome month

The Adventures of Lily

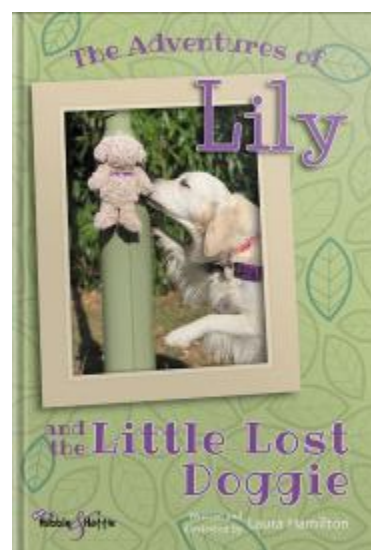

- By Laura Hamilton

Who can help Little Lost Doggie find a home?

Doggie was found by Lily, the Golden Retriever, under a hedge.

Though unloved, unclaimed and even bullied while unable to defend himself, Doggie found his world wonderfully changed by fabulous friends and amazing adventures that took him, with Lily and his new forever family, to Buckingham Palace to be rewarded for helping others.

Many characters and events in Doggie's story are real, as the photos show. Charming, original illustrations by the author seamlessly blend reality and fantasy. Doggie's story, with Lily, Pilot and Anne, shows the value of love and friendship.

(NOT CURRENTLY) IN THE KITCHEN

Article By: Fred and Tess

This month is a special In the Kitchen repawt as our really good friend Monty passed away recently and we are on our holibobs, so we are reviewing Monty's favourite food place he loved to visit when he was on his holibobs too.

In memory of Monty - we hope you still get to enjoy your fish & chips across the Rainbow Bridge.

Lots of howls and supportive paws for your humans. Fred and Tess x x

The Masons Arms Warkworth

3 Dial Place, Warkworth, NE65 0UR

Open:

Monday - Thursday 11am - 11.30pm,

Friday - Saturday 11am - 12am,

Sunday 12pm - 11pm,

Food served 12pm - 8pm

Dogs and Muddy Boots welcome

The Masons Arms is in the centre of Warkworth with a scrumptious food menu and a vast selection of drinks.

There are also bowls of water and three jars of help yourself doggy-treats on the bar (gravy bones, a mix and markies) and they also sell dog-friendly ice-cream in tubs.

During the summer months they have an outdoor pizza shack in the beer-garden. Dad always orders the Fish and Chips and his portion is massive, which he shares with us, and he said the fish and chips are yummy and divine (we agree BOL!). We ordered a portion of sweet potato fries and the barmaid offered to bring them out in doggy-sized bowls.

Mum goes for the hand-made cooked to order burger, topped with bacon and cheese, which she said is so delicious she doesn't share with us.

Mum and Dad also get a pint of diet coke and a large wine and with the meals comes to about £35.

The Masons Arms has a lovely dessert menu and their cakes look yummy and are huge, sadly Mum and Dad never have room for dessert.

Our friends, Monty and Skye also like the Masons Arms and especially the fish and chips too!

Wonder if the Masons Arms do a loyalty card, BOL!

PD JAY - THE THIN BLUE PAW

Hello all,
I am now 13 months old. My training is going very well. Stew says I am changing, I know I am here for a reason – to be a good Police dog.

I love having my nose down on a 'track', it could be a fox, badger, deer or rabbits. Stew makes 'monkey fist' toys for me, this is me with my favourite one in Shobrooke Park.

I have been on a three day 'assessment centre' for potential dog handlers at Devon and Cornwall Police headquarters Exeter, for them, like us, it is pass or fail. The candidates are male and female from Cornwall, Devon and Dorset. The course is to assess future dog handlers for their suitability to join one of the courses run by Devon and Cornwall Police. If they are successful they will be put on a list to join an initial General Purpose Police dog course at a later date.

Stew says my training is becoming more earnest now. More on that later.

As part of my environmental training, Stew took me to the local hospital. As always Stew said, 'we will only be here about 15 minutes', never going to happen! Once the staff and patients see me – that's it! Lots of attention and fuss – I know it's a hard life, but some dogs have to do it – and that dog has to be me! It was a good experience for me, different floors and smells.

My training is progressing and I am really enjoying it – well, what dog wouldn't if it involves lots of barking without being told off! The canine development officer is focusing on my 'bread and butter' – tracking. I am doing well, when the wind blows the scent off the track my nose makes adjustments for this and I follow the track to a successful find. The sleeve, oh! I love the sleeve! Stew says he feels sorry for the instructor wearing it, they often say, 'I really felt that!'. And, I won't let go.

My criminal work is great fun – it's made that way by the instructors. I really enjoy building searching. An instructor will tease me with a toy, he will run into a building and hide. Stew has to try and keep hold of me, he shouts a warning before I start my search. Obviously I am barking a lot with lots of tail wagging. Stew thinks I sound like a seal! He says it must be the sardines or mackerel I have in my biscuits for breakfast. When I find the 'bad guy' I bark even more. Here I am cornering the 'baddy', he tried putting me off by banging on metal filing cabinets and shouting – I love it! Doesn't he look scared!

At the 'assessment centre' I was paired with an experienced ex Metropolitan Police dog handler (now with Dorset Police) as I am so strong he was the only one who could handle me. The candidates were closely monitored by the dog school instructors. They were judged on how they cared for the dogs under their charge.

The instructors looked at how they integrated with the dogs, playing, grooming, cleaning up our kennels, (Stew calls them cells – I was in cell six), basic tracking, building search and getting into a vehicle. They also had to work with licensed dogs. Here am I in the cell block in cell six.

When I came home Stew took me for one of my favourite walks which involved several swims in the river. After that I was exhausted – I was so tired I couldn't eat a juicy marrow bone Stew gave me. I went straight to bed and slept.

Thank you very much Tigger for the gifts, the bandana and snacks. I particularly like the hickory smoked chicken snack – they are yummy!

I have to close now as I have to pack my bedding and my football. Alison and Stew are going away for a week, I am going to stay with the canine development officer and his dog Ella. It should be a fun week.

Until next time – bye for now,
Jay

OLLY INVESTIGATES...RAISINS

Repawter: Olly Whippet

Christmas is approaching friends. We all know what that means... food!

Now, I know what some of you are thinking, food is either tasty, yucky or boring. But I'm here to tell you that some food can be deadly.

I discovered raisins.

My mummy had left some at breakfast and had forgotten all about them. (She eats in bed at weekends you see, very lazy. Also if you were thinking muesli, you're wrong - it was rock cakes.)

That night, Saturday, she let me in to her bedroom and went to do her teeth. It was only when she got back to her room and saw the empty packet that she realised her mistake.

I'd eaten maybe 10 raisins. A panicked Google search was done which didn't help, but luckily my insurance company gives a vet line number to get advice, and my mummy worries, so she phoned it and they told her I needed to go immediately to the emergency vet.

It turns out that the relationship between us dogs, grapes, their tasty dried forms and their toxicity is still little understood. There are theories about the cause of the toxicity and also the dose relationship. You hear of dogs eating raisins with no ill effects and of other dogs dying.

At this point friends, I was oblivious. One moment I'm eating my dental chew, the next thing I know I'm being bundled out the house, into the car and into the vets.

Here the nightmare began.

First they gave me an injection to make me sick up everything I'd eaten. They then sorted through my sick looking for raisins (I like to think of this part).

They told my mummy that they'd found raisins and that there were two options.

1) They could send me home in the hope that they treated me quickly enough to prevent any damage.

2) They could give me the gold standard level of treatment.

I didn't know that "gold standard" could be a bad thing. I do now.

The vet explained that they couldn't be certain that the toxins hadn't already started to affect my body, or that they'd gotten all the raisins out. He said if there was any toxin still in my body it could cause permanent damage to my kidneys resulting in kidney failure and death.

His proposal was for an immediate blood test to check the levels in my blood. I would then spend 48 hours with them on a drip being given intravenous fluids and activated charcoal. They'd spend the time watching for my poo to turn black (strange people these medical types) and give me another blood test at the end of the 48 hours.

My mummy agonized and cried about leaving me at the vets. I'm so scared of everything you see. But when the blood results were in, she was glad she had, because in that short amount of time the raisins had hit my blood. My creatinine level on admission was 157 umol/l.

On Tuesday she got the news that my blood test at 48 hours was good news and I could go home. My creatinine level had gone down to 103.

To help, the American Kennel Club lists signs and symptoms of raisin poisoning as:

- Loss of appetite
- Lethargy, weakness, unusual stillness
- Vomiting and/or diarrhoea, often within a few hours
- Abdominal pain (tender when touched)
- Dehydration (signs include panting; dry nose and mouth; pale gums). A quick way to test for dehydration is to gently pull up on the skin at the back of our neck. It should spring back immediately.

-Increased thirst and/or urine production or diminished amount of urine or complete cessation altogether

-Kidney failure (which can be fatal)

In short friends, raisins: don't eat 'em.

If you do you eat any grape products, you need to seek immediate medical treatment

I did win the 'worst timing' award – my mummy had just lost a heated argument about the hazards of having the food waste bin on the kitchen counter in reach of my tongue.

Whoops!

DUKE VISITS CHATWORTH COUNTRY FAIR

By Repawter: Duke

So on Saturday 31st August I went to my first Chatsworth Country Fair. It was day 2 of the 3 day show.

Star is a veteran of the show having been many times before. There were rows and rows of shopping stands selling food, clothes, gadgets, furniture. That's just for hoomans there are also stands for us hounds selling collars, treats, dog beds and toys. There was also a veterinary College and Derby College stalls.

The hoomans kept getting distracted by the sky. First a World War II spitfire was doing a fly by but then a bit later men were falling from the sky It was the The Poppy Parachute Team

I also got fed some gravy bones from the lovely staff at the Peak District Foundation whilst hoodad signed up for updates about the Peak District.

By this time it was lunchtime so hoomans went to the dog friendly area up at the Carriages restaurant. Star and I did what greyhounds do best crashed out on the floor.

After lunch we walked back to the main show but looking at all the lovely vintage cars. Jaguars, Rolls Royce's, Morgan's, Austin's and many more....

Then there was more distractions from the Sky this time it was the Global Stars Aerobatics Team

Then it was into the food village where Hoodad had some funny coloured water Amazingly it was cider and not beer like he normally drinks - Apple Pie flavour and Hoomom got brought a bottle of Bakewell Pudding Cider.

I did get excited when I saw some big tools.

I am DIY Duke after all !!

As well as all the things I did there was also have a go at crossbow target range, clay pigeon shooting, archery and fly fishing. They also have a fun dog show, demonstrations from the national Lurcher & racing club as well as gundog scurries.

By this time we were all tired so headed back to the car.

I definitely want to return next year to the show - 4-6th September 2020.

INTERVIEW WITH - ALYSSA

Tell me a little bit about yourself.

My name is Alyssa Bunny. I am a house rabbit from western Massachusetts, USA.

I was rescued, but not in the traditional way, that is to say, from a shelter. Let me explain. A family purchased me from a pet store and brought me home. After a short time, it was discovered that the young girl human was allergic to me. This is where it gets scary.

Instead of bringing me back to the store or even to a shelter, the Mom told the girl's brothers to take me and leave me in the woods. Being a friendly, bright white bunny and with the coyotes, hawks and dogs around (and sometimes even bears), I wouldn't have lasted a day. Luckily the boys, even as young as they were, knew this and began canvassing the neighborhood, going door to door asking each person whether they could take me in. I didn't mention that it was pouring rain at the time, but it was. As they were just about to give up, they reached my furever home's door, a third floor apartment. This is how determined they were to save me. That determination melted my new human Mom & Dad's hearts when they opened the door and listened to the boys' heartfelt story, how many doors they had knocked on and been turned away from. How they couldn't bring themselves to leave me in the woods, but were afraid they would have to. How could my new humans say no? They couldn't. I am that cute.

Since that day, my humans have learned a lot about indoor bunnies (we can be litter box trained!) and I have learned a lot about humans. I can't imagine being anywhere else than with them and I'm pretty sure they feel the same way about me.

How many humans/siblings do you have and long have you had them?

I live with four humans: my Mom, my Dad, my brother and his son, my nephew. I have a large extended human family, too. I have three animal siblings: my sister, Babe the Cockatiel, my brother, Pete and my sister, Little T, both painted turtles. When I first came to live with my family on September 13, 2014, I also had a sister cat named Lily, who was my special buddy until she went OTRB December 28, 2015.

Do you work? If so where/what do you do?

I do not work, unless you count the bunstruction projects I have currently underway where I mold cardboard boxes to my liking with my sharp teeth.

If you could choose your name what would it be?

Good question. As the boys that couldn't keep me were leaving that day, my Mom asked their allergic sister's name, it was Alyssa. That's where I got my name. My human Dad has an ancestor named Letitia. That's a cool name: Letitia Lapin.

What is your favourite food?

Bananas!

Where is your favourite place to be?

I have several spots around the apartment that I frequent throughout the day, but for some reason I really enjoy laying next to the little rocking chair in the corner of the living room that the stuffed rabbit named Donna sits on.

What is your favourite way to entertain yourself (annoy your humans)?

Every so often I like to try to dig through the couch from the bottom up. It's funny when Mom and Dad start patting the cushions and saying no over and over again until I stop. Would love to have that on video.

What is your greatest accomplishment?

One time I stuck my whole head and upper body through my sister Babe the Cockatiel's birdcage door.

What is your next goal in life?

I would like to conquer my fear of non-carpeted floors.

If you could be/do anything for a day, what would it be?

If I could do anything for a day, I would find homes for as many shelter animals that I could.

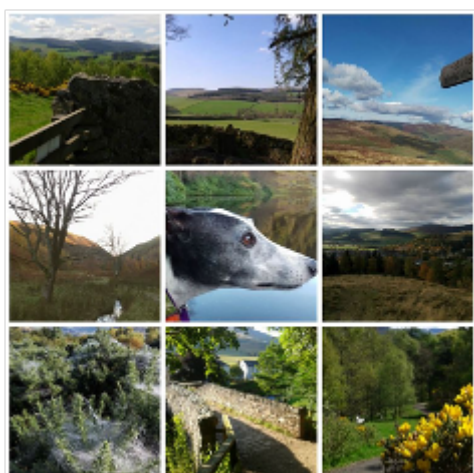

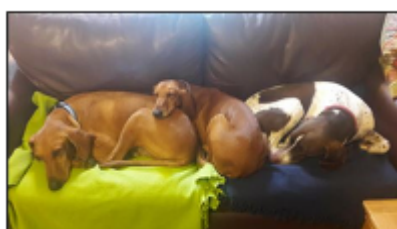

Finally...What was your human's most embarrassing moment?

One time my Dad decided to wear a new pair of jeans without washing them first. He and my Mom went grocery shopping and as they were in the checkout line, the female clerk asked him with a smile, "New pants?" Thinking he was looking pretty good (this was years ago) and that she was flirting with him, he answered "Why, yes they are." Then the clerk turned to Mom and thoroughly deflated Dad by explaining, "The price tag's still on them." That was pretty embarrassing.

ANIMAL CHARITIES

EPSOM CANINE RESCUE

About:

Epsom Canine Rescue was formed in 1995 to specialise in unwanted and subsequently neglected dogs within the local vicinity of Epsom.

We can only home dogs within a 20 mile radius of Redhill in Surrey, as we offer lifelong support if needed and follow-up with dogs, and we are only small and volunteers!

Our principle role is the rescue and re-homing of unwanted and stray canines, undertaking veterinary treatment if necessary and neutering where possible prior to sourcing a suitable new home.

Any animals in distress that we are unable to deal with directly due to our limited size and resources are referred immediately to other specialist organisations.

All potential new homes are checked thoroughly before the dog is released into their care and subsequent follow-up calls are made to ensure that the animal settles and to eliminate any problems that may arise.

We encourage the use of experienced foster homes during the re-homing process.

All our activities are carried out on a purely voluntary basis and financed solely by self generated funds and your contributions, monetary or otherwise.

Our dogs are homed as family pets, most having had a bad start in life and we do not place any dogs in a home where they would be living outside or left alone for long periods of time.

We never destroy a healthy dog, so please help us to give them a second chance.

Fen Bank Greyhound Sanctuary is a registered charity dedicated to the protection and re-homing of ex-racing Greyhounds.

They are based at Friskney near Skegness in South Lincolnshire, and were established in December 1997.

The Sanctuary, which obtained independent registered charity status in 1998, provides comfortable spacious accommodation for some 30 greyhounds of all ages who have come from all over the United Kingdom.

Fen Bank Greyhound Sanctuary take in dogs from many sources – trainers, owners, the police, the RSPCA and other welfare groups. Some are cruelty cases, including dogs with physical and emotional scars, dangerously underweight dogs, and dogs seriously ill from neglect.
