CHARITY OPENS NEW STORE IN NORTHUMBERLAND

Safe Homes and Kindness, SHAK, has opened a store in Blyth, Northumberland.

SHAK isn't like any other dog charity, they are different because they help the dogs that really need it the most.

They are not a re-homing centre like most animal charities, instead they offer sanctuary to abused, mistreated and neglected dogs that have suffered so badly at the hands of humans that they need somewhere to start their lives all over again.

SHAK are a non public facing charity, meaning we are not open to the public to visit the kennels, nor do they take dogs from members of the public.

All dogs are either strays or destruction cases from vets or pounds.

SHAK do not actively seek homes for the dogs. After spending time in their care, some of the dogs move onto other more breed specific specialised Charities or are fostered through their own Forever Foster scheme.

However, some are so badly damaged that the only option they have is to stay with SHAK for the rest of their lives where they will be given love, care, playtimes and sometimes life long medication for any health issues or injuries they arrive with.

This is why the opening of their store is so important.

It is not only a way to raise much needed funds for the dogs, but it also serves as an important information hub which raises public knowledge of the charity and what it does.

There is also a drop off box in the store. Here visitors can drop off items for the dogs.

Items that can be dropped off are:

- Tinned dog food
- Dried dog food
- Dog treats
- Dog toys
- Blankets
- Towels

If you think you may have anything the charity could make use of then email them to discuss it with them at shak@shak.org.uk

The store is open Monday to Saturday 9am to 5pm (subject to volunteer cover)

12 Bowes Street, Blyth, Northumberland, NE24 1EB

A MESSAGE FROM TIGGER

Hi readers,
Thank you to all pals that responded to my shout out for local repawters so that more areas could be covered in the newspaper and on the website.

If you are is interested in becoming a repawter for your area contact me.
- the repawter's role is unpaid.

More exciting news is that I am now 99% ready to launch my Tigger's Gift Bags so keep watching my social media pages for the big reveal.

Although, if you already follow me on social media , you will have seen Doris modeling a prototype Tigger's Birthday Gift Bag.

There will be various bags available .

Also there may be a possibility of having a 'make your own' where you can choose the contents.

If you are interested in purchasing or finding out more contact me.

Thank you all for your continued support

Nose bump to you

NEWS FROM DORIS - THE ROVING REPORTER

Greetings my roving pals.
So there I was snoozing on the sofa as usual and the humans asked whether I'd like a day trip... er, of course! We looked at the map and thought, Middleton on Sea, that sounds like a nice place to visit. An hours drive and with a beach, hurrah, pack the thermos flask. What we didn't realise, until we arrived, is that it's mainly residential and finding the beach and somewhere to park is almost impossible.

A total disappointment for a non resident but it does have an upside, it is close to Bognor. Yes, Bognor Regis, home of the best Butlins and memories of 1970s holidays (hers, obviously not mine).

Bognor is quite long, with a splendid promenade. It's easy to park and has a smattering of cafes and chippies. A couple of pubs, one called the Waverley at the western end is our favourite. It has a lovely terrace and is very doggy friendly, you always get fuss from the staff.

There is a small pier and bits and bobs for the kids. It's all rather nice in a British seaside way. Lunch was battered sausage and chips, which I have to say is always a winner, and pudding was an ice cream. All we needed was the Red Arrows to fly past and it would have been a perfect Bognor day out!

It's funny isn't it pals, just the simplest things make the best day out, like sun and chips. Us hounds don't need anything complicated and by the faces of all the kids I met, they didn't either (although maybe less seagulls nicking their candyfloss would help bol)

So next time your owners ask if you want to go for a daytrip bark yes, yes, and grab your travel rug!

Doz,

DUSTY'S DIARY

Hi folks,
I hope you have all been enjoying the falling leaves as much as I have, you can't beat them for a good kick after a poo to cover it up and laugh as your helpless human searches through the pile to find your carefully covered deposit!

Well, I have to tell you, the human has had the last laugh this month...I do like a good chase in the woods. I 'm not fussy what I chase, bunnies, deer, and sometimes when I'm naughty even the odd human.

The problem is I get caught up in the chase and have been taking my time to come back, despite the human's rather loud, embarrassing screams for me to come....So now I have two giant kitty bells attached to me so she can hear me!

The indignity! Plus the bunnies now hear me miles away so all I can do is inhale delicious bunny scent at their burrows!

Until next time.
Have a pawsome month
Dusty

YODA AND CHEEZLT'S SCRATCHING POST

Hey everyone!
Our furr-family has expanded, again. For the final time.

We are a family of four kitties now.
There is us, Yoda and Cheezlt.
There is Butter Bean, who is still recovering from the horrible wound that he had on his side. Now, there is BoyCat.

Momma rescued him five years ago when she found him outside after a storm.

She earned his trust, then trapped him (haha)...had his BoyCat marbles removed. Since she couldn't have pets, he stayed with a friend of Momma. But, now that we have more room, Momma wanted her BoyCat back (apparently three boys isn't enough).

We are all rescue kitties. Our paths crossed with Momma at different times, but in all four cases she opened her heart and home to us unwanted kitties.

Here, we are in the month of Thanksgiving.
But, it doesn't have to be November, and you don't have to celebrate the holiday in order to be...give...or show thanks.

We are thankful every day that we have our Momma. Momma is thankful every day for us. She loves us so much!

When humans and animals rescue each other, it's a beautiful thing.

We are trying not to be sappy. But, it's that time of year.

We are just trying to remind all our furry and non-furry friends to always take a moment to be grateful and thankful for each other that you have.

Some people have human friends. Some don't.

Momma doesn't. We only have each other.
That makes us love each other more.

So, don't forget to tell your human (or "pet") thank you for being in your life.
Sayonara for now,

Yoda and Cheezlt
(and Butter Bean and BoyCat)

ON THE BOOKSHELF

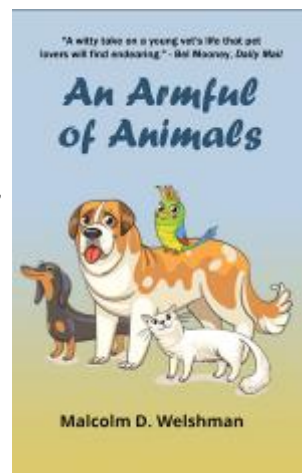

An Armful of Animals

- By Malcolm D Welshman

It's a collection of twenty stories which cover a span of 25 years.

Quite mix of subjects it seems. There's the tale about his African grey parrot which he has to operate on to save her life; their dog, Poucher, which saves his mother's life when their Land Rover plunges down a ravine – gosh, that sounds terrifying; and the expedition across the Sahara where Bossman treats a lame camel and a gored ostrich.

My books are available from:
Amazon as a paperback or ebook.

Pets Aplenty

- By Malcolm D Welshman

Join novice vet, Paul Mitchell, in a further six months of hilarious escapades he experiences while working at Prospect House Veterinary Hospital. Throughout his adventures, Paul is loyally supported by the team at the hospital - in particular Beryl, the elderly one-eyed receptionist, and, Lucy the junior nurse - together with whom he shares this merry-go-round of mayhem. It's a gripping, fast page-turner that's guaranteed to keep animal lovers entranced.

My books are available from:
Amazon as a paperback or ebook.

INTERVIEW WITH THE AUTHOR

Tell me a bit about yourself.

I'm a Yorkie-cross terrier found wandering the streets of Birmingham when I was about seven months old.

I actually appeared on a Nat Geo TV show called Leader of the Pack.

It was filmed over in Madrid so it meant me being flown out for the show.

There, three couples were put through their doggy paces by the US dog whisperer, Cesar Millan.

He assessed how good they were interacting with me eg when we first met up, feeding, grooming.

In the event, Bossman and his wife were considered to have the best empathy with me and they have hence been my forever home these past seven years.

What was the inspiration for the book?

It all revolves around the story of the African bush dog called Poucher.

Last year, Bossman started writing the fourth in the fictional series about the young vet, Pet Mitchell.

He was looking for ideas and started to rummage through a wooden chest of old scripts and jottings.

There he came across a script all about Poucher which he'd written well over 18 years ago and which he'd forgotten about.

He sat on the floor, started to read it and became completely engrossed, almost to the point that he wondered whether he'd been the one who'd written it.

Bowled over it seems. At that point, he had a light bulb moment.

Why not write a memoir?

Poucher would be an excellent starting point. And that's how this memoir of his has evolved.

I've seen him get misty-eyed when re-reading that story so it must be very close to his heart.

Are there plans for a future book?

One very simple answer. No. Seems Bossman feels he's used the best of his experiences and hasn't additional ones worthy of another book.

Finally, and most importantly...What was your human's most embarrassing moment?

Well, there have been several times when Bossman has played the fool, intentionally or otherwise.

But one stands out in particular.

The British Red Cross in his home town of Crewkerne, was holding a fund-raising day in the square.

The shop manager discovered a white rabbit onesie outfit complete with huge floppy pink ears and furry bob tail. And – you've guessed – asked Bossman if he'd dress up in it and take part in the day's activities.

Turns out, he was seen doing his best rabbit hop across the pedestrian precinct when a friendly Labrador decided this could be fun and games, gave chase, bowled him over, gripped his tail between his teeth and gave him a thorough shake.

I still shake with mirth thinking about it.

ROSIE'S PLACE, GOSFORTH, NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE

Rosie's Place
Dog Daycare
- Formerly
Lola's Place

Lola has em'bark'ed on exciting new adventures and has passed the baton to Rosie, who is now top dog at Rosie's Place Dog Day Care Centre.

She has appointed Anneka (her human) as Managing Director to continue the journey. Together they provide a safe and happy environment for your pooches to socialise and enjoy their day!

SO what's all the woof about? Rosie's Place is an A-MA-ZING dog day care centre conveniently located on Sandy Lane, Gosforth opposite Gosforth Park.

With two large outdoor and two large indoor play and agility areas set over an acre of land with climate-controlled log cabins, it provides both indoor and outdoor environments, giving your dog the perfect playground to socialise in all weather conditions.

Our fantastic staff are completely dedicated to caring for our furry visitors through play, socialisation and buckets of love within the clean, safe and nurturing surroundings of Rosie's Place.

Play keeps a dog's mind and body active and builds healthier, happier, better behaved companions. Boredom can lead to higher levels of destructive behaviour like chewing, licking, digging or barking and Rosie's Place can help to discourage this kind of behaviour.

SEEING IS BELIEVING!

About:

We began making homemade cookies from scratch in 2006 for our dog and dog neighbors, friends and family. Soon, we realized that they kept barking back for more! . So in 2010 we decided to turn our passion into a business. We feel strongly that our fur-babies deserve to get the freshest treats.

That's why some of our treats are made to order and baked daily. Ask us about our customized treats made for dogs with special needs.

About our chef and owner:

After attending Culinary Arts school in the early 90s and then baking for people, Carla decided that baking for dogs was a lot more fun!

After reading countless labels on dog food products with so many unnecessary additives & fillers, Carla decided to be the voice for her dogs, Max and Willow, and all their other furry friends and at Paw Patch Pastries, they are always barking for more!

YOU THINK I AM A WHAT...?

Article by: Doris, the Roving Reporter

Followers of my on social media will know that I was recently, and joyfully, mistaken for a donkey by a child. Yep, a donkey, I may be grey but I only weigh 24kg!

Anyway, my friends and I discussed the animals we've all been called. Bearing in mind we are all mainly greyhound like, here's our list....

Tiger - predominantly the brindle hounds

Horse or pony - greyhound to whippet

Donkey - just me

Giraffe - the taller ones

Cow - yep, you guessed, the black and white hounds

Zebra dog - is that a species?

Wolf - the fluffy hounds

And my personal favourite

Dinosaur - obviously a houndasaurus.

INTERVIEW WITH BRANDY SPANIEL

Brandy Spaniel Tell me a little bit about yourself

I am Brandy Spaniel, 6 years old; head of the household; good at taking control and causing chaos.

How many humans/siblings do you have and how long have you had them?

I have my Humum and Hudad, I was just 8 weeks old when I chose them. I also have my brofur 'Taika'; he is a funny wee thing with very small ears. I think he might be a cat but I luffs him very muchly. Rumour has it that I may have another little spaniel brofur arriving soon.

Do you work if so where/what do you do?

I am a home security pawfessional, no noise or movement, however small or insignificant escapes my superdupa spaniel senses.

If you could choose your name what would it be?

REBEL

What is your favourite food?

I have three favourites... Sausages, sausages and oh let me think.....erm yep definitely more sausages.

Where is your favourite place to be?

Looking out of the window from the back of the sofa. It's my elevated but comfy workplace where I can monitor the front gate, the side street and the back gate whilst having an occasional little snoozy.

What is your favourite way to entertain yourself (annoy your humans)?

I love running off with small items of knitwear. I then enjoy taunting my humans by daggling the treasured soft woolly items just out of their reach; if the back door is open, I like to discard the items in the deepest depths of the garden never to be seen or worn again.

What is your greatest accomplishment?

I once swallowed a whole catnip mouse, kept it tucked away inside my tummy for 3 days before reproducing it with a wretch and some theatrics in surprisingly good condition if slightly discoloured. Funnily enough my brofur didn't seem to want to play with it after that...fussy little thing that he is. I also memorably made my puppy school teacher's hand bleed whilst she was trying to use me to teach the group how to stop puppies biting. And I also won a battle of wills with Mr Vet who stupidly thought that I had forgotten how awful it is to have something sprayed up your snuzzle...well I wasn't going to let that happen twice, when my booster was due I thrashed about so much that Mr Vet gave up and opted for an injection instead. He wrote on my record "gets agitated" - the cheeky sod.

What is your next goal in life?

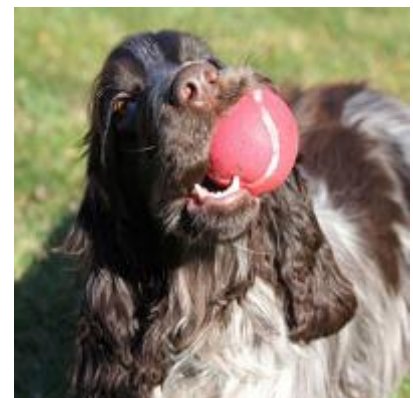

To convince my humans that I have a terrible allergy to kibble biscuits and should only be served the highest quality sausages, smoked streaky bacon and chicken. I would also like to pass on all my skills, tricks and knowledge to my soon-to-arrive baby spaniel brofur.....he is going to be my protégé.

If you could be/do anything for a day, what would it be?

Sausage taste tester?

What was your human's most embarrassing moment?

There have been several occasions when I've been out with my humans and I have suddenly found myself with an incredibly itchy bottom; I tend to remedy this affliction by performing an emergency scoot across whatever flooring there is available. Wool carpets are particular effective but I can also utilise gravel driveways, pavements, the shiny floor at the vets, freshly cut lawns ...anywhere really. Now for some unfathomable reason my humans find this highly embarrassing.

IN THE KITCHEN

Article: By Fred and Tess

This month's recipes are both from us.

We apologised for the lack of pictures as our human was not quick enough with the camera before tasting started BOL!

Liver cake

Ingredients:

Pack of liver

Equal amounts to the weight of the liver of Self Raising Flour (can use plain which makes it really dense)

3 eggs

oil or milk

Method:

Preheat oven to 180 fan.

Put the liver in a food processor & blend, add the eggs and blend again.

In a separate bowl add the flour and pour the liver and egg mixture into the flour and mix well.

You want the consistency to be really gloopy so at this stage add oil or milk to get the right consistency.

Tip the mixture onto a baking tray and bake for 25 -30 minutes, until lightly browner on top.

Remove from the oven and let it cool down.

Once cool, cut the cake into bite size pieces.

Storage:

The cake can be kept in a sealed tub in the fridge for about a week or frozen.

Cheesy Puffs

Ingredients:

100g grated parmesan or similar cheese

150g cottage cheese

300 plain flour

2 tbsp oil

Preparation:

Preheat oven to 180 fan.

Put all the ingredients into a mixer and mix well using the dough hooks.

Mould little portions of the mixture and place on the baking sheets.

Bake for 20 minutes and then turn off the oven and keep the biscuits in the oven until the oven is cold.

Storage:

Store in a tub in the fridge for up to 3 weeks.

If you have a recipe to share, email it to me at :

WINTER PAW CARE AND SAFETY

As winter approaches you need to be reminding your humans to take a bit of time to think about you and your paws.

This is not only directed at dogs, it is directed to all animals that may go out or be exposed to outdoor clothing/shoes.

There are a few vital things your humans need to know:

Frost/ice snow.

Although we can walk outside in most weather conditions and our humans usually forget to think about us during the 'nice walk' across various surfaces.

Along with the freezing surfaces, there is also the sharp ice. Not to mention any dangers hidden under the snow and ice.

When we are off lead zooming round, care should be taken to ensure we don't hurt ourselves by slipping or over extending ourselves when we are cold.

They need to be constantly reminded that we can suffer from toxic poisoning, frostbite, ice burns and cracked paws which could lead not only to pain, infections but also in some cases – death !!

Antifreeze/screen wash for vehicles.

This is very poisonous to us and even though it is poisonous, there is an ingredient (ethylene glycol) in the antifreeze that makes animals (and small humans) attracted to it.

Now I am not expecting you to remind your humans to top up their cars, but for you to remind them that if they spill any on the ground or on their shoes they need to clear it up.

Better still, if it is possible, store their shoes where you cannot reach them and to take them off before walking through the house.

Road grit/salt

This is poisonous for us. We are not attracted to it by smell, we walk on it and it gets in between our toes.

Some of us may be sensitive to it and get skin irritation.

So once we are able to, we lick our paws to get rid of the grit.

If after all your attempts to educate your humans they still do not take necessary precautions during winter refuse to leave the house, or better still shout 'HUGE VET BILLS'

Remind them to:

- Check your paws for cracks/cuts and ice.
- Clean/wash your paws after a walk.
- Ensure you are wrapped up well when going for walks, but making sure you don't overheat too.
- Take care with liquids when topping up their vehicles.

Stay safe during winter furpals
