WISHING YOU ALL A MERRY CHRISTMAS

NORTHUMBERLAND PUB WINS DOG FRIENDLY AWARD

For the second year running a dog friendly award was won by The Keel Row in Seaton Delaval, Northumberland.

Not only do they allow dogs, they also encourage dogs to bring their humans.

You can pop in for a quick refreshing drink after a long walk, a snack to enjoy or a three course meal for a full family gathering.

Dogs can either order individual items or a meal from the human menu.

If you are on a special diet or prefer your own dog food. You are welcome to bring that along to enjoy while your humans enjoy The Keel Row's delicious food.

Just remember to bring your food bowl

You can also book in special events such as Howl-o-ween, Birthdays, Gotcha days, Christmas or some other special event.

Whatever you would like to celebrate with your pals and humans just let the staff at The Keel Row know what you are looking for and they will be happy to help.

Some may say I am biased as I have help several pawties at The Keel Row, but when you get greyt service somewhere, you always go back.

Every time I have visited, even when they are really busy, the friendly staff at The Keel Row always make time to meet and greet me the same as they do to all of their customers.

Although I cannot remember the last time I saw them hug and tickle a human customer behind their ear!

There is one section which is for humans only. This is because not everyone is in favour of dogs around while they eat.

Next time you are passing. Take your human in and enjoy the hospitality of the Herron Family you will not be disappointed.

A MESSAGE FROM TIGGER

Hi readers,
I had an unexpected vet visit this month as the toe I broke in 2015 started hurting me . My humans rushed me to the vet to see what was going on. They were worried that I had broken my toe again. Thankfully I had not , but the screw from the first operation was hurting me so I had to have an operation to have it removed. The vet said it was because I was a powerful launcher!

Silly vet I am a lurcher BOL!

I am now healing and resting up as the vet has advised.

Other exciting news is that I can now introduce our new newspaper columnist, Trainee PD Jay, who will be writing a monthly column about his journey as a trainee police dog.

This will give you all a unique insight of Jay as he goes from trainee to working Police Dog. Welcome Jay!

Nose bump to you

NEWS FROM DORIS - THE ROVING REPORTER

Hello my intrepid pals, this month I've mostly been in the Isle of Wight. Those who know me will remember me visiting last year and recall my jaunt around the model village. Sadly it's shut in winter, but I gazed in wonder through the gates nevertheless.

So what was a lurcher about the island to do? Well unfortunately it rained heavily, and I mean heavily, so a lot of time was spent in pubs. Again, those who know me will laugh and ask 'what's new?'.... I do like a pub. Anyway thankfully the Isle of Wight has many pubs, cafes and restaurants and I've not found one yet that doesn't let dogs in (apart from the Indian). I've been to around ten different ones this visit, several restaurants and two hotels. Shops too are extremely friendly but you have to watch your tail knocking things over...

I also took a trip to the Garlic Farm. You wouldn't believe how interesting a place could be centred around the humble bulb. An education centre, café and shop entertained us (and half the island, it seems). It was full of dogs, although I suspect most were biding their time before the garden and squirrel feeding station.

Talking of the red fluffy tailed fiends, we saw three this year so very pleased with ourselves. Elaine also claims to have seen some sort of eagle but she was riding her bike at the time so could have been a fly in her face. Honestly humans don't half exaggerate.

It has to be said my favourite thing this visit was the chain ferry in Cowes. Yep pals, this boat is attached to a chain and it clunks backwards and forwards across the river. Not for the faint hearted to noise! I loved it though and all the attention a hound got on it, nothing like the shuddering of mechanics to make humans need to cuddle you.....

From the Island, Doz x

DUSTY'S DIARY

Hi folks,
What a month I've had! I started off as usual, sniffing everything and chasing things in the woods on walkies. I was zooming through the trees, on the trail of a blighter, twisting and turning, jumping over and diving straight through the bushes...until my chase was cut short by a tree unexpectedly appearing in my path and jabbing itself into my leg. I made it back to the human, who really wasn't overly sympathetic and muttered something about not learning from my mistakes and vets bills.

I was lucky that my vets are so accommodating, and I was rushed straight there, where the I did the loudest Greyhound Scream of Death ever when they stitched the hole in my leg back together. But folks, the indignity was not yet over, as my human told them that I needed a cone of shame to stop me licking my wound.

It wasn't all bad, as I soon learnt to use the cone as a battering ram, and even managed to learn how to pick up scraps from the floor while wearing it!

Have I learnt from what happened?

Well, I'm a greyhound, in-between long snoozes on the sofa, one of my main goals in life is still to catch a squizzer!

Until next time.

Have a pawsome month
Dusty

YODA AND CHEEZLT'S SCRATCHING POST

Happy Holidays to all of our furriends!

No matter where you live, or what holidays you celebrate, we want you to know we love and care about all of you.

We already had an interesting holiday happening...Butter Bean flew into the Christmas tree, and knocked it over (don't worry...he is ok).

Momma had a feeling something bad was going to happen because Butter Bean (and BoyCat) has never seen a Christmas tree before. We (Yoda and CheezIt) lived with a tree last year....and slept under it like it was our own personal forest.

Momma has a system to putting up the Christmas tree. It seems to work well...last year, anyway. First, Momma puts up the tree. She leaves it naked with nothing on it for a week or two. That gives us nosey boys a chance to decide what we are going to do with/do to the tree. If all goes well, then she will decorate the tree in a "kitty friendly" way (no dangly things at the bottom).

This year, not long after the tree was put up, Butter Bean sneaked onto a nearby shelf, and tried to fly into the tree. He kinda bounced off the tree, and landed daintily on his feet, and went about his business. The tree was not so fortunate.

That is our Catmas Story for 2018. It is also the reason we have no Kitty Catmas tree this year.

Thank you, Butter Bean. We hope you are more behaved next year!

Until next year,
Yoda and CheezIt (and BoyCat and Butter Bean)

ON THE BOOKSHELF

For the Quite Very Actual Love of Worzel Wooface

- By Catherine Pickles

Now in his fourth year with his forever family, life is changing. As the children grow up and begin to spread their wings, Worzel's world should be more peaceful.

But as life rolls on, a changing of the guard brings new challenges; challenges no-one seems ready to embrace, least of all the cats.

An over-enthusiastic encounter with a fish pond, a blackbird with a death wish, and a new arrival all conspire to ensure that whilst Worzel might be ready for an easy life, his family has other plans.

Mum, long-suffering Dad, five cats and two grown-up children all feature in Worzel's fourth diary, bringing together poems, letters and advice that Worzel's beginning to wonder if it's even worth offering any more.

The eagerly-awaited fourth instalment from Worzel, the literary Lurcher is funny, touching, honest, and very real.

My books are available from here:

Worzel Wooface

- By Catherine Pickles

Worzel is an enormous blonde Lurcher with 'issues.' When a disastrous turn of events means he has to be re-homed, his life changes dramatically.

Now, as well as dealing with his own issues, he's got to deal with a distinctly imperfect family. And cats. Shed loads of cats; none of which are that pleased to welcome him into their home.

Written as a series of letters to his previous owner; this is the honest, hilarious and wryly observant account of Worzel's first year in his new family.

My books are available from here:

JUST BEING FRIENDLY

This is getting to be the most common thing I hear when out for my walks with my human. I am always on lead and never off lead unless in very controlled situations.

Sometimes while I am out and about (on lead) minding my own business I am greeted/accosted, usually at high speed, by a very excitable dog that spends a few minutes darting around me and either barking or lunging at me.

So in retaliation to this assault on my personal space I react in the only way I know how. I go absolutely bat fink crazy!

Unfortunately their human is either miles away or totally oblivious to my plight.

This usually results in the other human stating I am aggressive and out of control. Really? Me out of control? I am not the one running up to everyone causing chaos and upsetting everyone.

So who is in the wrong?
The dog running riot or the dog on the lead?

It is the law (in the UK) that all dogs are under proper control at all times when out and about in public.

That means we must be on leads or 100% under verbal control if we are off lead.

Does this mean we should be rushing up to greet other dogs if we are off lead?

Absolutely not.
We do not always know other dogs. They may be fearful like me. They could be blind or deaf, in which case the sudden appearance could startle them.

They may be injured or being rehabilitated from a recent serious illness

Apart from anything else, it is just plain bad manners to rush up to an on lead dog and start bouncing around them.

If a dog has the tendency to go a bit over the top with their meeting and greeting they need to get their human to put their lead back on if they come across an on lead dog.

Or spend more time with their humans learning important things like recall and leave.

So please be considerate to others when out and about.

JAY - THE THIN BLUE PAW

Article By: trainee police dog Jay

I was born on the 19th August 2018 near Manchester. I have seven brothers and sisters. I was given the kennel name 'Obi' by the breeder.

When I and my siblings were seven weeks old we had an assessment by the head trainer of Devon and Cornwall Police dog section.

Only I and my brother Oscar passed the assessment to be Trainee Police Dogs.

When Devon and Cornwall Police advertised for puppy walkers they were inundated with replies. Alison and Stew heard nothing for weeks and weeks, then one day Stew had a phone call from a dog handler, many questions were asked on both sides. This was followed by home visits. When Alison and Stew were chosen they felt really honoured.

At nine weeks old the head trainer returned to Manchester to bring back my brother and I to Devon to meet our puppy walker families, we will live with them until January 2020 when I start my General Purpose Police dog training – it is a very hard course. Not all dogs make it, as many as two or three dogs out of six fail, this can be for many reasons.

When we arrived in Devon we were allocated to our puppy walkers. I was to live with Alison and Stew and my brother with a serving police officer and his family. This is a picture of me with Stew at my new home. I will be training mainly with Stew. They have a different accent here in Devon and added to this Stew is Scots! – but, I will get by!

After some discussion with Devon and Cornwall Police and the breeder, Alison and Stew changed my name to Jay. Alison and Stew's son Jamie (Jay) was a soldier. Unfortunately he was killed in early 2014 when he was 21 years old. Everyone thought it a fitting tribute to Jamie, and I am proud to have his name. This is a picture of me at Jamie's plot.

During my first nights I was upset to be parted from my siblings, Stew slept in the kitchen with me for three nights, after that I was okay. I have settled well into my new home with Alison and Stew. Here's a picture of me bonding with Stew and another having a rest on the decking after a hard morning chasing round, eating, sleeping and chewing my bone!

I am now 11 weeks old and have had all of my vaccinations, I am now ready for the great big world out there.

I have to attend fortnightly training sessions with the other pups on the puppy training programme.

I attended my first training session at Devon and Cornwall Police headquarters on Sunday 4th November. I met my brother again and the other pups on the puppy programme, the three other pups are two weeks older than us. I worked very hard on all the obstacles, Stew was very proud of me! We were taught how to practice the sit, down, recall, stay and leave, this is our homework until our next training session. Stew says 'leave' will be a useful command! I am good at sitting, recall and down. Here is a picture of me with my brother.

I have to go now to do my homework, Stew says I have to practice if I want to become a good police dog.

Also, more importantly I have to find a new hiding place for my bone in the garden!

So until next time bye for now!

TIGGER INVESTIGATES...TRIPAWD HOUNDS

Having had a minor issue while I was recovering from breaking my toe, I spent a lot of time not using that leg.

Which made me think of how animals that only have three legs handle things.

What is a Tripawd?

A Tripawd is an animal that only has three paws.

They only have three paws due to only having three legs.

This is generally due to having one leg amputated.

Why are animals Tripawd?

An animal can become a Tripawd for a variety of reasons. The main reasons are:

- Birth defect
- Injury
- Illness

I interviewed Phoebe, who is a Tripawd sighthound, to find out more.

Does being a tripawd involve extra work or training?

Training a Tripawd does not pose any additional work.

However, their ability to climb/descend stairs/steps may need to be assessed to see if they are able or confident to do that.

Also jumping into or onto things require a different way of balancing for the take off and the landing.

So although additional work or training is not required, a bit of time for the animal to adapt and gain confidence may be needed.

How long does it take to recover/adapt?

There are two parts to this answer.

First of all the time to adapt to becoming a Tripawd, as in the ability to stand and move around can be within 24 hours of surgery.

The actual healing of the surgery can take longer as it all depends on the healing process for each animal.

Can a tripawd run/run as fast as a 4 legged animal?

Yes they can in fact I have witnessed a Tripawd outrunning 4 legged dogs, if they ran before and love it they will run again, although for our humans it is occasionally heart stopping because they think we will fall but we don't.

Does it make a difference if it is the front or back leg?

Depending on breed and subsequent girth of the animal an amputation maybe harder. Front leg amputations are thought to be harder for animals as more weight is carried on the front legs.

Due to the anatomy of sighthounds there isn't much difference, even their large chests are deep but narrow which keeps their balance very central.

Can all animals cope with being a tripawd?

Depending on the animal and subsequent girth of the animal an amputation maybe harder on some.

If you were faced with a similar situation your vet would be best placed to advise on the ability to cope and recover.

Do animals still have a good quality of life with 3 legs?

Definitely. In fact many Tripawds have a better quality of life especially if the reason for amputation was due to a birth defect, illness or injury. I have never looked back.

If there are any animals out there are looking for support or would like to share their experiences, where can they go?

I have set up a Facebook page and would welcome any animal that is or will become a Tripawd.

My Facebook page is:

Phoebe's Story

I was rescued from the Dogs Trust by my humans and for a number of years all was well until we noticed a growth on my rear lower hock.

Various trips to the vet and a biopsy it was identified as being cancerous and it was agreed an operation was needed to remove it.

Unfortunately the nature of the cancer and location meant they couldn't confirm 100% removal and subsequently within 18mths the tumour had returned.

There was only two options euthanasia or amputation. I was only 6 and my humans wanted to give me every opportunity to live a long life.

After consultation with vet it was agreed the amputation would go ahead.

The operation was a success and after 5 days in veterinary care my humans were able to take me home

This was a very emotional reunion as my wound area was very swollen and bruised but I was walking. In fact they had me walking on day of my surgery.

My humans were advised to exercise me starting with short distances and then extending as they felt I could cope.

So every day we went for a stroll and I was fine, in fact I was amazing!

The vets words echoing in my human's heads that animals, unlike humans, don't have the emotional side of amputation as they don't have to worry about "how am I going to cope?" "How will I work, live, play, drive, financially support myself?"

Animals just get on with it and I certainly did.

Recovery went well and all my humans had to be careful that my three fur siblings didn't bother me or lick my wound.

My human made a makeshift coat out of muslin which I wore all of the time.

My humans were told that frontal amputations are harder for animals, simply because they carry more weight on their front two legs.

With mine being a rear leg amputation it was physically easier for me.

The only thing I don't do is climb the staircase. This is a choice as I have climbed them since the amputation but I am not confident going up and therefore I choose not to, but I can come down the stairs without any problem.

Here are a few pictures of me from before and after the amputation.

Including the picture that looks like my amputated leg is air brushed out of the picture.

IN THE KITCHEN

Article: By Fred and Tess

We have gone for a seasonal one as Mum gets excited for Stir Up Sunday with her Christmas cake and spends days soaking the fruit in mucky juice, and we cant have any of their cake!
This is quite a treat so making it once a year is ok.

Doggy Christmas Cake (makes 5-6)

Ingredients:

250g dried fruit (NO RAISINS)
150g chopped hazelnuts
150g almond flakes
130g wholewheat flour
2 tablespoons maple syrup
1 tablespoon of breadcrumbs
2 large eggs
Juice of one orange

Method:

- 1) Preheat oven to 180
- 2) Soak the dried fruit in the orange juice for 30 minutes, then drain and chop the fruit coarsely.

3) Mix all the ingredients together and once thoroughly mixed, let the mixture (should be like a dough) rest for 30 minutes.

4) Divide the dough into portions and shape into little flat round cakes.
Place the cakes on a baking tray and bake in the oven for 30 minutes.

5) Remove cakes from the oven and place on a wire rack to cool.

Storage:

Store in a tub for up to 2 weeks.

Below are pictures of us helping to cook.
Alas still no pictures of the completed recipe.

If you have a recipe to share, email it to me at :
