WINTER PAW CARE AND SAFETY

As winter approaches you need to be reminding your humans to take a bit of time to think about you and specifically your paws.

This is not only directed at dogs, it is directed to all animals that may go out or be exposed to outdoor clothing/shoes.

There are a few vital things your humans need to know:

Frost/ice snow.

Although we can walk outside in most weather conditions and our humans usually forget to think about us the 'nice walk' across the long hot path or sea of gravel in the summer, they need to be constantly reminded that we can suffer from toxic poisoning, frostbite, ice burns and cracked paws which could lead not only to pain, infections but also in some cases – death !!

Antifreeze/Screen Wash for vehicles.

This is poisonous for us. Now I am not expecting you to remind your humans to top up their cars, but for you to remind them that if they spill any on the ground or their shoes they need to clear it up. Better still if possible store their shoes where you cannot reach them and to take them off before walking through the house.

Road grit/salt

This is poisonous for us. Not only if your humans clear their path or even just take you for a walk, they need to know this can both burn you or poison you if you lick your paws after a walk.

If after all your attempts to educate your humans they still do not take necessary precautions during winter refuse to leave the house, or better still shout 'HUGE VET BILLS'

Get them to:

Check your paws for cracks/cuts and ice.

Clean/wash your paws after a walk.

Ensure you are wrapped up well when going for walks, but making sure you don't overheat too.

Take care with liquids when topping up their vehicles.

Stay safe during winter furpals and get your human told of the dangers.

CHECK VEHICLES FOR CATS

Cats often crawl into vehicle's engines and wheel arches to keep warm.

It is not always enough to look for paw prints in the snow as it may have snowed after the cat squeezed into the engine, or there may be no snow on the ground at all.

A lot of humans think opening and closing the vehicle door is enough to warn a sleeping cat.

However cats do not spring into action the moment they hear something. Especially if they have been asleep for a while during the cold weather.

There has always been the suggestion for humans to knock on their bonnet or walk around wiping and tapping their lights before opening their vehicle door.

This would give the cat time to wake up and squeeze its way out of wherever they were sleeping.

Remember cat safety in winter

This moth has been a very busy and eventful month.

After nearly collapsing my website with one press of the paw, I managed to spend 2 days getting back up and running Phew !!

So a word of warning furpals, if you run your own website don't work on it without keeping track of what you change BOL!

A MESSAGE FROM TIGGER

It has been a very strange month weather wise . With storms, sunshine , heat waves and early morning chills, some of my daily adventures have been either been a quick soggy dash or non existent as I refuse to leave the house in the rain.

It is worth noting here that if you have cold paws or nose after your walk, don't jump up on the sofa beside your human and put said cold paws or nose under their t-shirt to warm them up. They have a tendency to shoot across the room howling and doing the jump up and down dance. Which is worthy of an Oscar for the over dramatics. On the other paw if you are bored and they are not giving you enough attention....!

As it is now November I hope you are not too stressed with any fireworks doing off and you all stay safe out there.

Thank you for reading

Nose bump to you

TIGGER'S STUDY OF HUMANS

Time Management

Now humans always say they are good at time management, never late and always plan ahead.

That has got to be the biggest lie they tell everyone, apart from when they pretend to throw the ball and make us look for it for ages.

For example a normal meet up with my pals is usually organised at least a few days in advance. We know the time and place to meet and what we need to take.

In the day of the meet up it starts with my human milling around because they have probably forgotten what day of the week it is. Then the suddenly remember.

Now I can see we are getting near to the time we should be getting ready and jumping in the car but my human is still running around the house getting ready. Once ready they realise I am not ready yet so I am hurriedly dressed and we rush out to the car.

We somehow manage to arrive on time.

So with this in mind, after this month's research I have concluded:

Humans do not understand time management, they tend to work on varying levels of chaos

NEWS FROM DORIS - THE ROVING REPORTER

Hello from Scotland or halò as it is on Gaelic Scottish!

This month's Roving Report is from around Scotland's NC500

We always intended to drive as north as we could around Scotland and the route is now being promoted as the 'North Coast 500'. Essentially five hundred miles of scenic roads through the Highlands and Lochs.

For some reason (blame the humans) we drove the route anticlockwise which, to a dog, is the wrong direction!

From Inverness, Fortrose up to Wick and John O'Groats. Then left along the top towards Cape Wrath and down the west side to Ullapool.

Because we're in a bigish motorhome we drove maybe 350 miles of the full loop avoiding the teeny weeny roads.

The scenery is spectacular, especially in the west. Imagine a Scottish scene, massive hills covered in heather, clear sparkling lochs, castles and stags.

It honestly looks like what you've imagined, however cheesy!

Okay some stretches could be any farmland anywhere and the odd place is bleak but generally it's beautiful.

Elaine spent 10 days staring at the sea for dolphins and the sky for northern lights. Four seals, a couple of dolphins and some lemon streamers in the night sky sufficed.

John O'Groats was amazing to lead walk in although Dunnet is the true north.

I ran on fabulous sand beaches and waved my paw at fellow motorhomers on single track roads.

There were a lot of dogs being chauffeured along the route and they all enjoyed the haggis.

I would recommend it to any hound... just bring a blanket! Love Dozza, heading south x

DEAR TIGGER.....!

Dear Tigger, M&D always tell me off for shouting & rushing at that Hoover advert dog on tv. Don't they realise I'm trying to protect them? - Hendon

Hi Hendon, unfortunately humans are not as skilled as us to understand the complexities of our communication ability. Have patience with them as the advert will probably end soon so you can stop trying to protect them and no longer get frustrated at their lack of understanding.

READER STORY

- By Katie & Graham

Just a note to let you know how uzfamblyizdoin, now dadz can type wiv out cryin, after the tragic loss ovuzsisfur Poppet at the Bamburghtweetup in April this year.

As you, an most ov der readers ov your excellent publication are aware, poor Poppet died in dadz arms on Bamburgh beach from what da vetanhairymans have said woz most likely an Aneurysm aged just 5.

When weez got home from Bamburgh all de hoomins seemed to be in a bit ov a fug an were really missing Poppet an her antics, meself an Graham woz ok but we had permanent wet fur from da famblies tears and kept getting randomly hugged followed by more wet fur.

Now, uzmomz and little momz am made of stronger stuff than dadz in regards to these matters, usually yoo can whack dadz on de head wiv a hammer an he don't even notice (momz said this is cus he's from Bilston). Somomz decided datavin a dadz like a big wet blancmange around da place woz no good for da fambly and as we now had a spare collar, lead, an most importantly a place on da sofa, weez needed anuvverhoundie around da place, an lets face it, there's a lot ov poor hounds lookin for their forevva home.

The following Saturday momz grabbed the blancmange an stuffed himz in da fambly car along wiv little momz an uz two an off we went to Wolverhampton RGT in search ov a new susfur. We fink dadz had gone a bit mad at dis point cus he kept shouting 'no more dogs' but momz told himz to shut up az he didn't know wot he wozsayin.

At de kennels momz an dadz went for a look round while little momzwozwalkin about sayin she wanted at least anuvver three houndies, an who can blame her cus we all knows datweez am all beautiful. After a few minuets momz decided on one ov the hounds andadz got uz out ov the car all muzzied up, don't want no accidents.

Twas very excitinmeetin a prospective new sisfer but unfortunately she woz a bit too boisterous for me an she woz put back in da kennel. Momz brought out anuvverhoundie and dadz walked uz all together round da small field an everythin seem ok, so it was decided to put uz all in da compound, wivmuzzies on, to see how we got on. This didn't go well as I wozavvin none ov it, when the new hound walked up to me I walked off and stood as far away from her as possiblean the body language wasn't good, so she too woz returned to the kennel. Now when Terry, the RGT bloke, brought out the third hound ov the day weez immediately rushed up to meet her, Graham gave her a good sniffin den walked off to pee on everythin he'd pee'd on five minuets ago, then I gave her a good sniffin an I liked her. We wandered about in da paddock for a good fifteen minuets while da hoo's chatted den dadz said. "Ok, lets try em in da car".

Weez all walked round da small field first den we came up to da back ov da car, blow me down if the newbie didn't just jump in da car like it woz hers an lie down, quickly followed by meself, you've gotta get yer place I thought, an den stoopid Graham jumped in lyin in da gap between newbie an me. "That's it then" said dadz tomomz 'Katie says we'll have this one'. Andatwoz it, she, now being Lucy,woz part ovuz pack. Not a replacement for Poppet but anuvverhoundielivin in Poppets spot and helpin heal da Poppet sized hole in uz hearts.

But, an it's a big but, Lucy as a story ov her own, an I'm gonna let her tell it.

LoadsaHugs, Katie an Graham

- By Lucy

I'm Lucy and I'm gonna tell yoo about meself an me new home.

I iz a five year old 26k little lady Greyhound, I lookz little when compered to giant Katie, I raced 105 times and won 10 ovens, not very good but I did me best.

I had only been in da kennels about a week after I woz retired, in fact da luffly kennel staff hadn't even had chance to give me a write up, when I woz introduced to my new fambly.

I ad seen two ov my new friends be taken out an den bought back, an to be honest, I'd just ad me bowl of food an wozlookin forward to a snooze when Terry came in an said 'cum on, yoo might av a home'.

Well I put on me best face an trotted out nice wiv Terry, first I wozmet by a big tall lad, Graham, an den a massive girl, Katie. Graham gave me a good sniffin an seemed a nice lad den Katie came ova, blimey I thought, she's a big un, but she sniffed me an seemed ok so I followed her about a bit. We all then went for a bit ov a walk an jumped in a car which seemed to make my new fambly very appy.

Next thing I new I woz in a home, on me back on a sofa avin me belly rubbed by me new dadz, dis iz heaven I thought.

One Sunday we got to go to summat called a tweet up where I met loadsa new pals such as Molly Malone, Robbie an Roxy, Peachy and Digger, Izzy an anuvverTigger in fact loadsahoundies an honouy-houdies, dis life iz fantastic I woz a thinkin to meself but unknown to uz there was a bit ov bad news coming.

During one ov these belly rubbin sessions I heard dadz say that he'd found a lump on me teat. I didn't really know wotwozgoin on but I'd got to go to the vetanhairyman, flippin hell.

The luffly vet Kimberly at Walpole and Bingham checked me ova an said the lump had to be cut outaz it could be nasty, so I woz booked in for the followin week.

The op went well andadzwoz very appywiv my recovery but the newzwoz bad but good. The lump woz cancerous but the vet had got it all an itwoz low grade. Phew, dodged a bullet there izwot I wozthinkin.

Two dayz later dadzwoz-checkin me wound, which wozlookin good and noticed anuvver lump in the next teat along, oh no!

Off to the vetanhairyman we went asap to see my new best friend, Kimberly. She gave me the once ova and suggested I had a 'strip' taken out. This meant I had to av all the breast tissue removed from my one side, meaning loadsa stitches an staples, to say my new famblywoz upset iz an understatement, I weren't too appy.

Although it sounds really bad everythin seems to gone ok, I woz operated on an had over 25 stitches but the vet got all the tissue so no chemo required, phew annuver bullet dodged.

So I am now livin the life ov riley snoozing an walkin an eatin, I luff my new fambly and my bruvver an sisfer an I fink dey luff me

Lots ov luff

TIGGER'S FIRST 4T EVENT

Teaming up with Soft Service Consultancy we organised a sponsored walk around, up and over Northumberlandia to raise money for Children in Need and my first 4T event where I was collecting Tins (food), Treats, Toys or Towels (bedding) for Safe Homes And Kindness, the charity that helped me find my forever home.

On the day of the sponsored walk it was a bit damp but not enough to dampen the spirits of those that attended. We met in the car park and started the walk.

Walking half way around we kept to a steady group, although there was a rumour we had misplaced a couple of humans somewhere at the start line.

As we walked up the steep paths of Northumberlandia the group managed to spread out a lot. We all completed the walk and celebrated by heading to the cafe on site for refreshments.

The cafe is very dog friendly so we all sat inside to get a break from the damp conditions, although it must be said as soon as we sat down the sun broke through the clouds and it dried up considerably.

The humans had hot drinks little while us hounds had treats handed out by several of the humans.

Both the humans and the hounds enjoyed the walk and said it had been a great event with talks of hoping this was not the only event.

We had our own official photographer so there were plenty of great photographs of the day.

Thank you so much to everyone that donated

I would like to thank everyone for making it such a great day:

Soft Service Consultancy, Strawberry, Daragh & Coco, Dusty, Kai Whippet and gang and of course all of our human friends and family.

INTERVIEW WITH BARNEY

Tell me a little bit about yourself.

I'm Barney and I'm a Wheaten Terrier. I'm 10.

How many humans/siblings do you have and long have you had them?

My dad is Keith Newman from Highlights PR and my mam Lesley runs an antiques business called All Your Yes-terdays.

There are some other people I rarely see as they live in their bedrooms. I think they are called teenagers.

Do you work? If so where/ what do you do?

I sleep most of the day now as I'm getting on in years. I can still run as fast as any other dog especially if I'm chasing things like shadows or birds.

If you could chose your name what would it be?

Barney suits me I think.

What is your favourite food?

I get steak every night but prefer eating chicken feet

Where is your favourite place to be?

In bed but when I'm not there I love running free on Druridge Bay. There's nine miles of unspoilt beach and sea for me to play in.

What is your favourite way to entertain yourself (annoy) with your humans?

I really enjoy barking when it's dark just as the humans settle down to watch TV

What is your greatest accomplishment?

I once won an obedience award. Ha ha that's so ironic now

What is your next goal in life?

More sleep

If you could be/do anything for a day, what would it be?

I love going out in the car so I'd like to have a go at driving it

Finally and most importantly...What was your human's most embarrassing moment?

It's usually when I've done more than one or two No2's and they've run out of poo bags and they have to use a hankie - it's so funny.

DEAR TIGGER.....!

Dear Tigger, at bedtime when it was raining heavily, I took one look at the rain when the back door was opened, and went for a pee on the living room rug. My human now puts me on a lead and tricks me into thinking I'm getting a walk to make me pee in the front garden. I feel cheated, but can't help myself for going outside as I love walkies so much. She tells me I'm just being a diva and to get over myself as if I'll go for a walk in it, I can go for a pee too!

- Strawberry

Hi Strawberry, it's not good to pee on the living room rug.

Yes humans are tricky at times and it is not good for your human to trick you into thinking you are going for a walk. Next she does it have a sit down protest. Yes it means you will get a bit damp but she will get soaked and hopefully will not try to trick you again

FRAUDULENT APPEALS FOR HELP AND MONEY

There has been an increase in fraudulent social media appeals claiming to be for the benefit of an animal.

As social media and emails are rapidly becoming the main source of communication unfortunately it is becoming an easier target for fraudsters to use this type of 'money collection'.

Now before you all start jumping on your keyboards and contacting me, you need to read all of this article.

My aim is ensure everyone's hard earned cash they choose to donate, is directed towards genuine charities/individuals where animals actually get the help they need.

Requests for money may involve a tragic story about an animal, some even have upsetting pictures to make the request more believable.

They use a variety of tactics to gain access to your money. One tactic is to do a social media campaign and wait for the unsuspecting public to send money.

Another more involved tactic is to send out emails requesting money or even thanking you for your donation/order. Individuals may have a personal appeal and I am not saying they are all fraudsters, I am saying just be careful and aware.

The key thing with the email is to NOT click on the attached document. This document may have have a virus that will attempt to get details from you, mostly to get your bank details.

In most cases the emails thanking you for your donation are merely a tactic to get you to click on the document before you have time to think.

If you ever get an email thanking you for your donation/order then check with your bank directly if you need peace of mind. Don't forget your bank can check on transactions that are still pending so you will be told if any activity has occurred on your account.

Always be careful of any emails with documents attached or links for you to click on, even if they appear to be from your friends.

What can you do to protect yourselves?

Genuine charities will have their charity number displayed on their website/blog page/facebook page/other advertising.

They will not mind being asked questions as they will be aware these fraudsters are not only taking potential donations from their animals in need, but also damaging real charities reputations.

Individuals asking for money for their pet, if you do not personally know the individual then ask for the contact details of the vet dealing with the animal and donate directly to the vet.

Always be sure who you are about to give money to. There is a government page where you can check that charities are genuine.

HISTORY OF A ..... CORGI

When I first looked into doing the history of a Corgi I thought it would involve research, which I expected, and writing an article. What I have since discovered is that a corgi, although small, are very interesting to research. This is what I discovered.

There are two breeds of Corgi, the Pembroke and the Cardigan and both are dogs from Wales, their names taken from the Counties they originated from. The Cardigan is the larger of the two breeds and the Pembroke has the natural bob or short tail.

The name Corgi has a number of names and thoughts about its origin.

It has been said that the Corgi started out as Curci, meaning cur (mixed breed) and ci (dog).

Then another trail originated the name as Corci, meaning cor (dwarf) ci (dog) but when putting the two words together it was pronounced corgi, which is probably why the spelling changed.

The history of a corgi is another mix of thoughts and theories.

What is agreed is that the Pembroke is the oldest breed as its lineage has been traced back as far as the 10th Century where they herded cattle, horses, geese, ducks and sheep.

They are known as 'heelers' a name they gained because they would nip the heels of larger animals to keep them moving. Their short height made it harder for the animals to kick out at them. They were once known to guard children.

I found three strong theories as to their history and as I don't know which is correct I will give you all three.

History #1

The Vikings brought the dogs with them as they travelled to live in Wales.

History #2

The modern Corgi evolved from a shared ancestry from the German Dachshund.

History #3

This is my personal favourite. Folk legend says that the Corgi was a gift from woodland fairies and the marks on its coat were from the saddles and harnesses of fairies.

So as you see although the Corgi is a small dog it is definitely a dog of mystery

DEAR TIGGER.....!

Dear Tigger at what low temperature is it hound law for me to keep my jammies on all day? #pleasebe20degrees
– doris hi Doris, I think you should be able to wear your jammies as often or as long as you want.

Unless you are going out for a walk as you should change into more appropriate outdoor clothing.

Dear Tigger, is there a time machine where I can turn back to feeding me twice

more? #askingforafriend
- strawberry

Hi Strawberry, unfortunately not that I know of. If you do manage to get hold of one do let me know so that i can share the great news with everyone.

DOGS - WHAT SHOULD I EAT?

I am not a nutritionist nor do I work in the animal food industry.

This is a non scientific attempt at explaining how you can be more informed as to how to select the best food for you with out telling you what to choose.

I do NOT cover specialist dietary requirements as you should be talking to your vet and not a dog on the internet (me).

One of the most common questions on animal groups is 'What should I get my human to feed me?'

Here is an overview of what humans should be looking at and be considering while picking food for you.

Now before you consider rushing out to change your diet, you need to remember what ever you are on now is what your stomach is used to. So any changes need to be gradual - even if it is keeping to the same type but a different brand.

Food comes in all shapes and sizes. It also comes in all different grades of nutritional value too.

You need to try to spend time researching the best for you and also be able to stick within your budget too. Now don't be fooled into thinking the cheapest is the worst and the most expensive food is the absolute best.

Make sure you read the ingredients label and check that you know what you are eating.

The primary thing to remember when buying any food is that colours are generally for the human's benefit.

Let's face it they would not feed their small humans on artificially coloured food for every meal would they?

As a dog myself, my first thing would be to use my sense of smell, taste etc.

The actual colour would be low down on my list of priorities for selecting food. You may think 'but my dog loves x colour in their food'. Well no not really what we are selecting is based on smell and texture.

Also how you fare fed is important. If you are taller you will need a raised feeder. That can be a shop bought stand or a creative homemade device that will not tip or have anything that you could get hurt on.

Some dogs get fed once a day and some get fed several times a day.

The key thing is to get your humans to listen , yes listen, to your. If you are fed once a day and they look like a keg and are struggling to move then you need your daily food split up into different meals.

If you are fed several times a day and are still hungry then start throwing your bowl around straight after a meal to let your humans know you may need bigger portions and less often throughout the day.

For food the choices are seemingly endless but there only a few real choices, the rest are down to brand names and packaging.

The first place you need to look is on the food label. Once you familiarise yourself on how to read the label then the next step can be a lot easier for you.

On the label the ingredients are listed in order of 'most to least'. Now this sounds great if it starts with Beef. However if there 99 other ingredients, just how much Beef is there in the food?

DOGS - WHAT SHOULD I EAT?

Plus a lot of manufacturers fill up words to make things sound more edible when in fact they may not be as good as you think.

If you know of any label ingredients you come across that need to be mentioned (good or bad) then please let me know and I will add them to the list.

Label Information:

Look at how things are listed:

Higher value named meat products may be stored more carefully (colder and cleaner) than by unnamed meat and meat meal.

Protein should always be listed first. Although look closer, check out how it has been listed.

For example:

Chicken, Lamb, Beef – yes that is the way you want to see the food listed.

Chicken meal, Lamb meal, Beef meal – not the ideal cuts from the animal but still have some nutritional value

Meat, Animal – this could be from any animal or multiple types of animals.

Meat meal, animal meal – this could be any part of any animal such as skin, connective tissue, bone, beaks etc.

A note to remember is that 'meat' and 'meal' could differ in ingredients for each batch made. Which could explain why one week you like the food and the next you don't.

Protein:

Chicken – great source of protein and easier digestible for sensitive stomachs

Duck – great source of protein, omega 3 & 6, good for a healthier coat

Egg – great source of protein and fat with a good selection of vitamins and minerals

Lamb – great source of protein and good for coats, skin and hip/joint care

Salmon – great source of protein and omega and amino acids that are good for health and energy

Salmon oil – good for Omega 3 and 6 which helps prevent skin allergy and inflammation

Trout – Great protein source with low saturated fats and high in omega 3, good for joint protection and mobility

Turkey – great source of protein and easier digestion

Vegetables, Grain and Fruits:

Fresh and whole are fine listed higher in the ingredients list as they still contain all of their natural nutrient and vitamins.

If they are listed as processed foods such as rice bran etc. as long as they are lower in the list than the fresh or whole vegetables, grain or fruit they are not ideal but okay.

The scientific stuff:

There is always the lit of long scientific words we cannot say, never mind know what they are. Don't be frightened to write them down and look them up to see what they are.

CALLING ALL OTHER ANIMALS

I have been approached by readers asking if I was going to do a newspaper for other animals too.

My website and newspaper is for all animals, not just dogs.

So if you know of other animals that would like to share their stories, news and tell everyone about the embarrassing and crazy things their humans get up to. Tell them to get in touch with me.
